Greeting People at Work

When I go to work each day, I walk into the store and see my supervisor and co-workers. They are usually talking or getting started with their work tasks. They say “hello” to each other, and they ask questions like, “What did you do last night?”

When they see me, my supervisor or a co-worker usually greets me. Sometimes, I feel anxious about getting started with my work, and so I don’t want to greet them or “chit chat.” But, when I am greeted by others, I will try to respond to them by saying “hello” or “good morning.” It is nice to respond to someone when they speak to me. After I have given them a friendly response, I can get started with my work.
